CREATING AN LGBT WELCOMING SERVICE

We all hope to be welcomed when we walk through a door, yet we know LGBT older adults fear, and sometimes receive, poor service and abuse when looking for help. The 2012 survey of Twin Cities lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) older adults¹ showed fewer than one in five believed they would receive sensitive services if a provider knew they were members of the LGBT community. This fear often keeps elders from seeking services and can make their situation worse.

How do you signal your service is LGBT welcoming?

We know that most LGBT baby boomers and older adults would prefer to use the services of providers that welcome everyone, including LGBT clients. They look for signals that indicate a service is LGBT friendly such as:

Interpersonal communication & behavior signals

- Partners and same-sex spouses are acknowledged and included in care discussions.
- Provider practices good body language that is supportive and does not show surprise, shock, or other negative emotions when LGBT status is revealed

Intake and interviewing signals

- Intake form language includes options for diverse sexual orientations and gender identities

Onsite visual signals

- LGBT artwork or images of same-sex couples
- Rainbow stickers or other LGBT recognized signage
- Prominently posted inclusive or non-discrimination statements
